Countering Myths

Editor:

First, I want to thank Barry Evans for his periodic Field Notes, which serve to enlighten us on an eclectic variety of topics. In his last column on "The Myth of the Lone Genius" (June 6), he noted that the lone genius concept is in fact a myth, failing to take into account the many who came before and upon whose shoulders the discoveries are based, and often the colleagues with whom the genius worked. The saying "it takes a village" is apt because it requires us to recognize the interconnectedness of humanity and the spread of knowledge among cultures and fellow entrepreneurs and researchers.

That said, we live today with the spread of many myths, including the myth of “the great man” who alone can solve the world’s problems. Such myths are both mythical, by definition, dangerous and counterproductive. And we need to recognize them as such. But myths have persisted for centuries and the comment from the author Renee Diserta discussing her newly published book Invisible Rulers that “if you make it trend, you make it true” needs to be heeded. She was discussing how influencers, algorithms and crowds are propagating such myths.

Let us recognize these myths for what they are and be willing to be search for the truth.

‘This Downward Spiral’

Editor:

In my Aug. 31 NCJ column (“Pension Debt is Devouring Local Services”), we looked at the big picture regarding pension debt.

Now, let us look at this issue regarding a much more defined issue, the issue of funding $477,000 annually for the Arcata House Partnership safe parking program (“No Safe Parking,” June 6).

Transparentcalifornia.com lists pay, benefits and pension debt amounts for each public employee. With pension debt now listed as a separate line item, we can see the cost of this expense very clearly.

I went through top local government officials’ compensation and looked at the pension debt amount listed for the latest year data available, 2022. How many officials did it take to reach $477,000? Surprisingly, only seven. Here are the pension debt payments needed to reach $477,000: (1) $133,759; (2) $73,745; (3) $70,659; (4) $59,807; (5) $56,895; (6) $56,370; (7) $51,870. The total is $503,105 for just these seven employees.

Humboldt County Fourth District Supervisor Natalie Arroyo was correct in her op-ed for the Times-Standard (Jan. 20) that this is a downward spiral. Loss of funding for the Arcata House Partnership safe parking program is an example of this downward spiral.

Other examples of this downward spiral? Eureka’s budget has a $1.1-million deficit just a few years after its huge sales tax increase took effect in 2021. Humboldt County has a $12.4 million budget deficit and its general fund is on track to run out of money in less than two years. Humboldt Bay Fire has a staffing shortage with one station closed. Arcata, Fortuna and Humboldt County are all looking at tax or fee increases to be placed onto a debilitated private sector. All backed up by the State of California’s $45 billion budget deficit. Stay tuned. We’ll all see where we are a year from now.

Grand Jury: Eureka Schools Acted ‘Hastily,’ Without Due Diligence

Report blasts trustees for lack of transparency, failing to fulfill fiduciary duty

By Thadeus Greenson
thad@northcoastjournal.com

After investigating Eureka City Schools’ decision to offload its former Jacobs Middle School site in a property exchange agreement with a mystery developer, the Humboldt County Civil Grand Jury has issued a report criticizing the district for a lack of transparency and due diligence.

“The Humboldt County Civil Grand Jury concludes that the Eureka City Schools Trustees acted hastily and without sufficient due diligence,” the report states, adding that while the district appears to have complied with the “technical requirements” of California’s open meeting laws, it violated “the law’s general intent for public participation and transparency in decision-making.”

Eureka City Schools Superintendent Gary Storts, who took over the position for the retiring Fred Van Vleck just days after the board of trustees voted to enter into the controversial property exchange agreement, offered a brief statement in response to a Journal inquiry about the grand jury report.

“Eureka City Schools was pleased that the grand jury report concluded that there were no legal violations,” Storts wrote in an email. “The District will respond directly to the grand jury’s findings and recommendations, which will be discussed publicly in an open session at a future board meeting.”

In investigating the Dec. 14 property exchange agreement between Eureka City Schools and AMG Communities-Jacobs, LLC, in which the district agreed to transfer more than 8 acres of the Jacobs site to the mystery developer in exchange for a residential property on I Street and $5.35 million in cash, the grand jury says it interviewed district officials and advisors, reviewed meeting agendas and minutes, as well as media reports, and consulted with an expert in California open meeting laws.

The report makes clear from the outset that the grand jury’s aim was not to determine whether “the transaction is a good or bad idea for the district,” but to look at district trustees’ decision-making process. That process saw the district abruptly cut off negotiations with the California Highway Patrol, which had reportedly offered $4 million for the Jacobs campus, hoping to relocate its Northern Humboldt headquarters there, in favor of the more lucrative $6 million deal offered by AMG in the form of a property exchange, which allowed the district to bypass the regimented process of selling off surplus public property. The grand jury report concludes the board of trustees effectively “rubber stamped” Van Vleck’s negotiated deal, “expressing implicit and unquestioning trust and confidence” in the former superintendent and the district’s counsel, without doing any due diligence of their own.

“After years of delay, the whole deal was introduced and rushed to completion in less than [two-and-a-half hours] at the Dec. 14, 2023, ECS Trustee meeting,” the report states.

The report details the property exchange agreement’s apparent ties to parallel efforts to thwart the city of Eureka’s plans to replace city-owned downtown and Old Town parking lots into housing developments, concluding that district trustees “have been knowingly or unknowingly roped into the ongoing local housing versus parking controversy.”

Specifically, the report notes a “circumstantial pattern of involvement,” detailing how Bradley B. Johnson, the same attorney who negotiated the land exchange agreement on behalf of a newly formed LLC looking to acquire the Jacobs property, also represented a group that’s filed numerous legal challenges to the city’s housing plans and another seeking to block the plans through a citizen initiative that will appear on the November ballot. That initiative would also rezone the Jacobs property to accommodate high-, medium- and low-density residential development, which its proponents have argued would create more housing than Eureka’s current parking lot conversion plans.

“Attorney Bradley B. Johnson is the common denominator,” the report states, noting that he reportedly initiated contact with Eureka City Schools in August on behalf of AMG.

The connections between Johnson and the efforts to combat Eureka’s parking lot plans are well documented in state filings, the report notes. Filings with the California Secretary of State’s Office list Johnson as the chief financial officer and secretary for Citizens for a Better Eureka, a group funded by local businessman Robin P. Arkley’s company, Security National, to file lawsuits (filed by Johnson) challenging the city’s plans. Johnson has also acted as legal counsel for proponents of the Housing for All Eureka initiative, while he also signed the Jacobs land exchange agreement and a separate purchase agreement for the residential property on I Street on behalf of AMG.

AMG Communities-Jacobs LLC, both through its spokespeople and on a website created to share information about the Jacobs site, has repeatedly denied any affiliation with Arkley. The website states AMG is backed by a “small investment firm,” though a spokesperson later clarified it is “a private group of small individual and family investors.” Through a spokesperson, Johnson has declined to say whether he or his law firm is a principal in AMG.

The report charges that trustees have a fiduciary responsibility under California law to use “all possible skill, care and prudence to make decisions that will produce positive results for the community.” Yet, the report alleges, trustees voted on the property exchange agreement without sufficient time for them and the public to review, understand and question it. Further, the report notes trustees failed to publicly verify the actual identity and finances of whoever is behind AMG Communities-Jacobs, LLC, which was formed two days before the property exchange was approved. The LLC, the report notes, has communicated with the district exclusively through attorneys and its principals have not been publicly identified.

“With a $6 million offer on the table, common sense to assure this offer would come through financially was brushed off,” the report states. “The ECS Trustees did not exercise due diligence and did not inquire about the resolution agreement. ... During our investigation, we observed patterns of behavior including interviewee inability to remember important events, inconsistent statements, obfuscation or dissembling, and purported absence of emails, text messages and other records.”

The grand jury’s finding that Eureka City Schools complied with the “technical requirements” of California’s open meeting laws — known collectively as the Ralph M. Brown Act — conflicts with the opinions of a number of experts previously interviewed by the Journal. They opined that the district violated the Brown Act by failing to list the address of the I Street property the district was negotiating to obtain on the Dec. 14 meeting agenda, and also by failing to make drafts of the exchange agreement and an accompanying resolution to authorize it available to the public when they were distributed to trustees, several days prior to the meeting.

The first three of the grand jury's six findings focus on noticing deficiencies that deprived the public of "an opportunity to be informed and to question the details of the pending decision." Other findings charged the board failed to "fully vet" AMG, further denying the public an opportunity to be informed, and that the district "conducted unrecorded, secret, undocumented and undisclosed negotiations," denying the public an opportunity to question the deal and the grand jury the ability to determine whether the district complied with terms of the California Government code.

The report recommends that the district make details of the property exchange agreements public, implement a procedure for complying with open meeting laws and conduct a "comprehensive" training of staff on the subject.

The district has until Sept. 10 to formally respond to the grand jury's report.

The property exchange, meanwhile, remains in escrow, with a close date of July 11. Back in February, the district identified a host of "disapproved conditions" with the I Street property that needed to be addressed before the exchange could take place, including unpermitted work, improvements that are not code compliant and potential pest issues. An amended exchange agreement required that all issues be "cured" by June 15, after which the district would have two weeks to reinspect the property.

On June 15, Johnson sent the district a letter on behalf of AMG stating it has "engaged a contractor to complete the required repairs and is in queue for that work. We anticipate providing a final report on the repairs by the first week of July." The district, meanwhile, remains in the process of pursuing a lot line adjustment needed to fulfill its requirements under the agreement, with Storts saying its surveyor is currently completing the district's application. ●

It's mid-June — the days are long and generally sunny, the summer solstice draws near, and Pride Month is well underway. As Humboldt County's Fourth District supervisor representing most of the greater Eureka area, including the physical space where the courthouse sits in the heart of downtown Eureka, it was an honor to sponsor this year's Pride proclamation. In that proclamation, passed unanimously by our board as a formal part of our agenda, we took the opportunity to share some of the history of Pride Month and its roots: the Stonewall Uprising in 1969, the civil disobedience that both predated and followed Stonewall, the legal battles for basic human rights and the sense of celebration and joy this month brings to millions of people today. In addition, that proclamation is the policy document that affirmed that the county of Humboldt will fly the Pride flag at the courthouse throughout the month of June, keeping with what both the California and United States governments do at civic buildings throughout our beautiful nation.

I did not usher in this tradition — it began in 2022, the year before I joined the board — but I was filled with joy to continue it. I've heard from dozens of community members who were brought to happy tears seeing the Pride flag flown at the courthouse. One community member said he never thought he would see something so affirming of his love and his very existence in his lifetime. Another resident, a young adult, said simply seeing the flag during Pride Month pulled them from a deep depression and gave them hope. I don't know why anyone else chooses to be an elected official, with all its many challenges and nearly insurmountable problems, but this is certainly the "why" for me — the chance to boldly and visibly stick up for the people of my community, in all their humanity.

This past weekend, someone took down the Pride flag at the courthouse and, according to an anonymous report filed through a local hate crime reporting portal that was shared with me by email, left it damaged at the base of the county's flagpole. The crime is under investigation and the precise details are still unclear. However, people noticed — particularly people for whom that flag was an affirmation of their lives and their worth. While no one was physically injured during this overt crime on Humboldt County property, the intention was clear: It was meant to harm and disparage people. To me and I hope to many of you, it is also a call to action to show up and unflinchingly support the community this act was intended to hurt.

Pride Month includes ample celebrations and joyful parades, physical symbols like flags, pennants and special attire, and events galore. While these are sometimes approached with a sparkly, even goofy lightness, we are in fact celebrating people's intrinsic and inviolable identity at these events and through these symbols. I want people who participate in and feel represented through Pride Month to feel safe, seen and supported. Pride represents a true rainbow of identities, including who people love and how people live as their truest and most genuine selves. The risk of not looking out for our community is clear: Increased risk of suicidal thoughts/actions, mental and behavioral health impacts, and physical health problems are the most pressing issues. Harming tourism, hurting our reputation as a safe place to be and impacting important processes like recruitment — of medical providers, students and teachers — are also notable.

What can each of us do to show up for our neighbors, family, friends and even perfect strangers who are hurt by this?

Speak up when people trivialize the importance of these symbols and the very identities of our fellow community members. (That includes trolling like, "Why

Caltrans Chooses Tunnel Option for Last Chance Grade

A resolution to the landslide issues that have plagued the narrow stretch of U.S. Highway 101 in Del Norte County known as Last Chance Grade is inching closer to reality.

In a decision years in the making, Caltrans recently announced it will pursue what's been called Alternative F, which entails realigning the highway and constructing a mile-long tunnel to sidestep the problem area.

"After many generations of Del Norte County citizens traversing this fabled, continuously failing section of our state highway system, we have reached the conclusion to construct a tunnel with broad agreement among regional stakeholders," Del Norte County Supervisor Chris Howard in a news release. "Del Norte County is grateful to our community, tribal, environmental and agency partners that have dedicated many years to finding a path forward."

The other option on the table — narrowed down from an original six, each with their own set of complicating factors — was continuing efforts to stabilize the 3-mile-long section of highway, an endeavor that has cost tens of millions in recent decades to maintain the vital artery that connects California's northernmost reaches to the rest of the state.

A catastrophic failure on the cliffside route that has seen regular closures for as long as it's been open could leave businesses in Humboldt and Del Norte cut off from their suppliers and customers, children separated from their schools and sever the only viable link between Del Norte County's southern residents and their seat of government.

The only other option is a 320-mile, seven-hour detour via U.S. Highway 199 to Interstate 5 to State Route 299.

Even with that milestone of selecting an alternative reached after extensive reviews and the collaborative effort of tribes, environmental groups, lawmakers and other stakeholders, the road ahead remains long.

According to Caltrans, the project's construction costs carry an estimated price tag of $2.1 billion in "2031 dollars," with the tunnel — which would be the longest in California — maximizing "long-term reliability" by offering the ability to circumvent "chronic landslides, coastal erosion and the impacts of climate change while ensuring safety during seismic events."

"While the option presents challenges due to the sensitive environment and potential impacts on large-diameter, old-growth redwood trees, Caltrans is committed to delivering a successful project through partnership, community support and collaborative mitigation efforts, exploring all avenues to stay on schedule while prioritizing quality, efficiency and preservation," the release states.

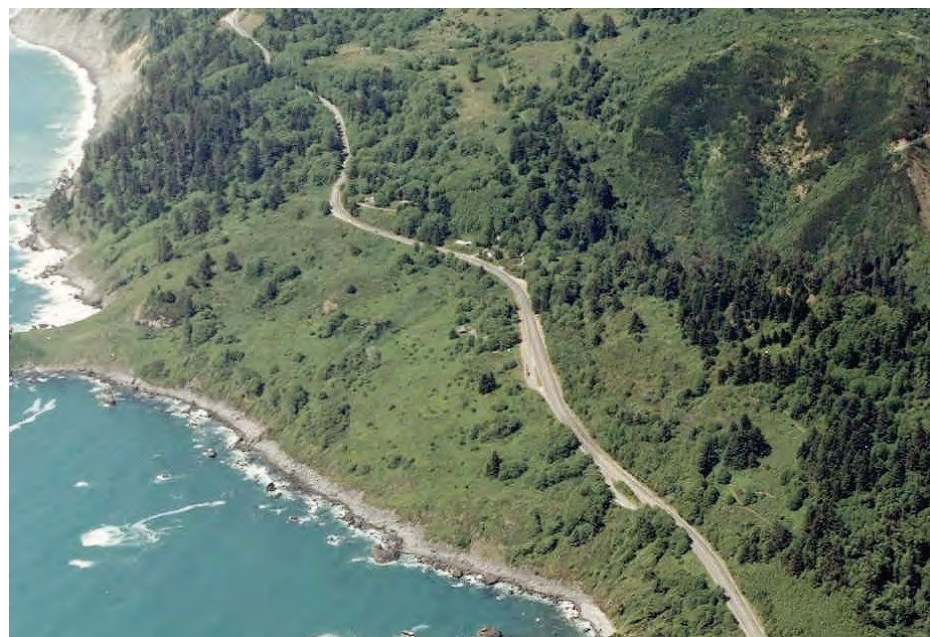

The hope is to start construction as early as 2030, with the tunnel opening eight years later, but that's all contingent on a host of factors aligning, including obtaining the funding and finalizing environmental documents, with Caltrans noting the agency "is looking for any and all opportunities to accelerate this timeline."

"We are grateful for the support of our community and partners, and we are confident that together we can overcome the challenges ahead and deliver this critical project for the people of the region and the state of California," Caltrans District 1 Director Matt Brady said.

The Environmental Protection and Information Center (EPIC) also voiced support, stating in a news release that "the process by which the tunnel alternative was chosen was transparent and well-executed."

"EPIC, together with many other stakeholders, has participated in over 10 years of meetings, and feedback from these meetings has shaped and improved the decision," the release states.

While acknowledging the choice will Caltrans plans to bypass Last Chance Grade with a mile-long inland tunnel.

Submitted

come with impacts, including the removal of old growth redwood trees, EPIC states that those will be "less severe" than other alternatives previously under consideration.

"EPIC is committed to continue working with Caltrans to refine the project to reduce avoidable impacts and to ensure that whatever impacts cannot be avoided will be minimized and mitigated to the maximum extent possible," the release states.

The challenges of Last Chance Grade are nothing new, dating back to 1894 when a wagon trail was first cut through the desolate stretch, with some 200 active landslides documented in the area. The idea of moving the roadway inland was even raised back in 1933 when the current route was built, but those plans were derailed, mainly due to cost.

And so, over the ensuing decades, Last Chance Grade has been a constant work in progress to stave off a major failure that could have devastating financial repercussions, with Del Norte County alone estimate to be at risk of losing $300 million to $400 million per year in economic productivity, along with an estimated 3,000 to 4,000 jobs from an extended or permanent closure.

"It's been a long road, so to speak, identifying a consensus solution for the failing 'Last Chance Grade' section ... in Del Norte County, but thanks to a great inclusive, transparent and deliberative process, we have a project," North Coast Congressman Jared Huffman said in a social media post, noting the work ahead is "not an easy fix."

"But now we can all lean in together and make it happen," he continued. "The ad hoc stakeholder group I put together about six years ago, in partnership with [state] Sen. [Mike] McGuire, Assembly-member Wood and local leaders, was key to reaching consensus here. I'm excited to start moving forward on this ambitious but necessary long-term solution."

McGuire expressed similar sentiments.

"After decades of inaction, the Last Chance Grade permanent improvement project is on the move," he said in a release. "The decision to advance with a tunnel will finally give Del Norte the safe and secure passage on Highway 101 that the community has long deserved. Building this tunnel will be a feat in engineering that also protects the old growth redwoods that have grown for centuries at this World Heritage Site and treats ancestral lands and cultural sites with the utmost care and sensitivity."

"This decision is an incredible milestone for Caltrans District 1 and represents six years of intensive collaboration and analysis," he continued. "We owe huge gratitude to Del Norte neighbors for their patience along with city, county leaders and tribal leaders, local environmental leaders, the state of California and the federal government who have been working overtime to get this job across the finish line."

A Shell of a Time

The Arcata Plaza was packed for the 34th Oyster Festival on Saturday, June 15. Locals and visitors alike stood chatting in long lines for beer and foraged festival foods amid the crowd of vendors and trucks. Meanwhile on the lawn, folks picnicked and danced to live music, and competed in oyster calling in the sun. Photographer Aoife Moloney was there to catch some highlights. See the full slideshow at northcoastjournal.com. ●

Best Oyster Goes Pop-up

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

By 9:45 a.m. on Saturday, June 15, chefs, staffers and volunteers were pushing through the doors of the former Mazzotti's, carrying platters of oysters on drifts of white salt, cold stones and ice. Most of the restaurant, slated to open as another Italian spot under new owner Jack Wu, was dark, but there was plenty of light up front. Jessica Silva (a Journal contributor), in a T-shirt and crown of flowers, directed those bearing hot and cold entries for the Arcata Bay Oyster Festival's Best Oyster competition to their assigned spots on tables by the front windows. That Silva had been banned from Mazzotti's after sparring online with its owner seemed to add gleeful mischief to her zipping around the dining room.

At the height of the pandemic, the Oyster Fest competition adapted, first by taking judges on the road to try entries at participating restaurants while the festival itself was held remotely. Then, once it returned to the plaza, organizers responded to dwindling contestants by lifting the long-standing rule requiring entrants to sell the same oysters at the festival. This opened the competition to not only those businesses that couldn't manage the cost of booth rental, staffing and supplies, but also individual chefs and home cooks. The change is evident in the submissions and the winners. Those hoping for a taste of the Oyster Fest victors' wares will have to visit a stand or a pop-up dinner. Contestants and their helpers were still arranging cilantro flowers and tobiko, and adding droplets of sauce to shucked shells, when a cheer erupted from the judges' table by the bar. One of the judges had returned with an unsanctioned pitcher of beer. Once Silva called the start of judging, she and the 10 judges — Sue Charnes, Bob Doran, Lucia Ordonez, Wendy Chan (another Journal contributor), Michael Bettencourt, David Baes, Colleen Toste, Marisela Carrillo, Misha Blacker and Laysha Roberts — began milling around the tables spread with platters to make their notes on presentation.

Once the intact spread was evaluated, the sampling began. Rather than the slow process of parading each dish one at a time, tasting progressed in what Silva acknowledged was a streamlined frenzy, with everyone picking up half-shells, eyeing them, downing them and marking notes and scores in their printed pamphlets. A couple late entries didn't slow the process much. When only a few stray shells lay beached on silver trays, everyone returned to the judges' table to discuss the respective merits of gumbo sauce and cucumbers hollowed into shot glasses.

(Both delicious, the latter more difficult to consume with dignity.)

Pamphlets in hand and judges dispersed to the festival outside, Silva began tallying scores. The loosely anonymous entries (hard to miss them carrying in their submissions) were revealed, with previous competition stalwarts Tomo, Sushi Spot, Blue Lake Casino and Hog Island Oyster Co. notably absent, though Manzanilla Kitchen, A Taste of Bim and 511 made returns. (Mouse ear-sporting team Shuck E. Seas should be noted for its Kinetic-level name.)

With "Korean BBQ," David Orluck offered big, intense flavors, snagging him both Best Overall Oyster and Best Hot Oyster. The North Bay Shellfish Kumamoto was cooked in a sweet Korean barbecue marinade, playing on the oyster's richness rather than its brininess. The half-shell was packed with a pinch of tart and spicy kimchi, a morsel of beef bulgogi, green onion and pickled carrot slivers. "I never want to reuse the same recipes from the year before," he said, coming off his second Oyster Fest win. This year's concept came from a friend and his love of all-you-can-eat Korean barbecue joints, and the recipe went over well at a pop-up event he did with Mother's Cooking Experience and Septentrio Winery. He added he's looking at another event there soon.

May Siricharoen, who recently launched her Tasty Thai-ger stand at Friday Night Market, also took home a pair of awards. Her painstaking care paid off with Best Presentation for her "Andaman Sea" cold platter, featuring Kumamotos served with either basil-lemongrass granita or Thai-style chimichurri and crispy shallots. The former earned Best Cold Oyster with Thai flavors that enhanced the taste of the shellfish and that more than one judge remarked were transportive. Having just returned from an inspiring family trip to Thailand, that's what Siricharoen said she was going for. "I just wanna present that flavor, that Thai flavor to the judges," she said. "I'm a pretty competitive person," the veteran of the TV show Chopped added. Relatively new to Humboldt, she said she's also hoping her wins will boost her name and draw interest in the Tasty Thai-ger

That Mainly Lobster took Best Local with its "Competition Oyster" was a bit ironic, given its name, but only the vermillion points of Maine lobster claw, garlic butter and lemon juice hailed from out of county. The Kumamotos, chives and Huck's Humboldt Hotties pineapple-habanero hot sauce cleverly captured in boba-like pearls that burst after the first taste of shellfish, were all local. Owner Chris Downs grew up in Maine with a lobster fisherman grandfather — the same docks he worked supply the lobsters Downs ships to Humboldt for his newly minted business. He's done one pop-up event at the Pub at the Creamery, and booked a stall at Oyster Fest to introduce Mainly Lobster to a wider audience. The award was a happy surprise, though he said, "I had high hopes — I knew I was doing something no one else was doing with the lobster and the sphere-ification of the hot sauce." Oysters aside, Downs said he plans to bring his lobster rolls and ravioli to more restaurant pop-ups and festivals over the summer.

Becky Evans' and Lori Goodman's large-scale installation PLAY

By L.L. Kessner

It all started with two 4-by-4-by-4-foot boxes of wood wool — great piles of curly, hay-like wood shavings — marked “FREE” outside Miller Farms Garden Center. Artist Becky Evans saw the boxes and thought her friend and fellow artist Lori Goodman might want to use the material in her paper-making practice. Eventually, they transformed the material into PLAY, a color drenched, provocatively tactile, immersive installation in Goodman's Eureka barn.

When Goodman initially saw the volume of material Evans had secured for her, she told Evans it was too much, telling her, “Take it back!” Instead of going back to the garden center, however, the wood wool sat in Goodman's barn for about a year.

Then one day, on a whim, Goodman began coloring the wood wool with the dyes she was using for her paper. She discovered the shredded wood fiber, also known as excelsior — a biodegradable packing material, often used in pet bedding and gift baskets — took the dyes exceptionally well. Over the course of some months, with Evans' help, the boxes of discarded packing material became mounds of curly, vivid, color-stuff.

Evans' and Goodman's original plan for the stuff was to make some kind of sculptural installation in a field. During the dying process, however, they brought some of the colored wood wool into the barn to dry and realized they had already created a huge installation on the floor. They began to play. Their artistic play was intuitive, spontaneous and free from deadlines.

“If it wasn't fun,” Evans says, “It wasn't something we wanted to do.”

The artists experimented with crafting bundles, and with developing visual contrasts and counterpoints, moving the material around. The whole process, they say, was based on “discovery.” Ultimately, they learned the excelsior lent itself to being hung on the walls with finishing nails. Over time, Evans and Goodman covered the four walls of the barn, edge to edge, from overhead down to the ground.

The installation, which opened to public viewing during Open Studios, demands to be touched and offers sensory contradictions. Its material looks fluffy but feels rough. It appears as though it might be dangerous, possessing some visual qualities of fiberglass and asbestos, but is in fact entirely safe and earth-friendly. Colors blend to form gradients around the four structural surfaces, leading to a rich, dark, purple and black field along the back wall. The installation calls to mind celestial associations, which are reinforced by bright wrapped forms that dangle from above like an enlarged mobile in the center of the room and operate like space objects contrasting against the black backdrop when viewed from the entrance.

The hanging sculptural forms and the regions of alternating colors on the walls invoke the style of early 20th century German-Swiss abstract painter Paul Klee, with casual geometric shapes made of smooth edges calling to mind nature and music above mathematics. PLAY's color blobs look amoebic, like they want to — but don't quite — become pictorial, and sometimes roll themselves up into balls.

Though it is comprised of wood wool, the wall-mounted part of the installation actually operates like a huge, hinged, four-panel abstract painting. Swaths of color act like big brush strokes, evidencing the materiality of the wood shavings and the breadth of the artists' arm spans. It is playfully meditative. The space inside the installation feels like it is staging for ... something, as though the room is waiting for an event to occur there. The viewer stands inside a giant packing crate that is the barn, in the negative space between the packing materials, where some gigantic fragile object ought to be.

Both Evans and Goodman stress that, as the title suggests, PLAY was entirely intuitive and spontaneous, a diversion from their usual serious themes, conceptual endeavors and deadlines. It is not, however, wholly disconnected from their separate practices. In their individual work, the two artists have weaving in common, working with non-traditional textile arts. They also both regularly construct installations. They say they were excited to make something vibrant and short-lived, and will, upon the completion of the PLAY exhibition, enjoy returning to their own studios.

PLAY will again be open to the public Sunday, June 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Get the location and/or make a viewing appointment through July by contacting the artists at loribgoodman.com and beckyevansart.com.

NCJ SETLIST

Black Hole Sun

By Collin Yeo

music@northcoastjournal.com

Here's an interesting notion: This Thursday's summer solstice will be accompanied by a waxing full moon that will reach its peak two days later. This probably has a variety of implications; for my (mostly) nightlife beat, it means your weekend will start out with more skylight than we have had all year. To put it less prosaically, the Cathedral of Summer will fold back its vaulted ceilings to celebrate an extended Mass of Celestial Illumination for us pilgrims of the Northern Hemisphere. You know, weather permitting.

I'm hoping this Strawberry Moon comes more ripe and juicy than blood red, as we're getting too much of that already. Ditto for war, wildfires and other calamities. Let's hope we get a break from the ruckus. But hoping for, or writing about, these things does nothing to head them off. The mind and body of a human is ill-equipped to wrestle with the Angel of History as it is blown forward by the Storm from Paradise, leaving a rubble-field of "progress" in its wake, as it looks to the past with a desire to correct our atrocities and heal the dead. That's a very narrow reference to a much broader work on historical materialism by Walter Benjamin, published the year of his suicide near the border of France and Franco-ist Spain, while trying to evade capture by his era's avatars of the human death drive, the Nazis. Like his contemporary Arthur Koestler, Benjamin's understanding of the course of human events ripened during a time of great metaphysical evil and informed a near-intangible, spiritual quality in his analysis. And he, like so many others, died in desperation under the bright, indifferent light of the sky above, trapped in the snares of fascism.

I'm not anywhere near as brilliant as Benjamin but I am still alive, and can therefore write (see above for the value of that, but still). And what I am writing now is a proposition for everyone reading this to consider taking this time of abundant physical light to consider how to convert it into a metaphysical brightness to help resist the forces of death-driven ignorance that dominate the policies of our power elite. Those terrible few who leverage their outsized power to inflict undignified immiseration and pockets of mass death on the living people of an increasingly polluted world. Can we hope to shine a beacon over the bloody debris of history and the atrocities of the present, and with blinding clarity, say, "This will be no longer tolerated?" I don't know but we've gotta try something before it's too late. Because, as Benjamin sadly discovered, there's no certainty of escape and survival when the darkness has spread.

Have a bright week.

The Alley Cats, sometimes known as the Opera Alley Cats when playing in their home turf in Old Town Eureka, are playing a free one tonight at the Basement after 7 p.m. Be on the lookout for my buddy Brian's new trombone, which came in the post from Japan, looks like a beaut and I am certain plays twice as fine under his control.

Friday

More than 60 years since its creation, Memphis, Tennessee's Stax Records is still churning out records by acts that mix gospel, R&B, soul and the blues like nobody's business. One such hometown hero group is Southern Avenue, a large ensemble that lays it down heavy and danceable. They'll be at Humbrews tonight at 8 p.m., along with Claire Bent & Citizen Funk holding down a local family jam to welcome the road dogs and warm up the stage ($20).

Saturday

The Miniplex is hosting Goth Night XIII, and this installment is a celebration of the quaint mall goth aesthetic that has largely died out with big structure American retail spaces. I am old enough to prefer the earlier thrift store/Salvation Army version of the style but to each their own, and I certainly won't pretend that the zealous adherents to the Hot Topic look haven't maintained appearances over the years. The music kicks off around 8 p.m., and will be overseen by DJs Satanica, Ratgirl and FauxVelvet. Whether you prefer vinyl boots or clothespins and lace, all over 21 are welcome ($10).

Quiet Movies, Big Feelings

Hit Man and Inside Out 2

By John J. Bennett

screens@northcoastjournal.com

HIT MAN. In my inscrutable-to-some fervor to defend Bad Boys: Ride or Die and the deliciously trashy legacy of that franchise, I failed to reserve enough column-inches and enthusiasm for another, quieter but no-less satisfying contribution to the amorphous agglomeration of late-stage American mainstream movies. In the same weekend that saw Will Smith as Mike Lowery on the receiving end of a series of (maybe) meta-textual face-slaps, director Richard Linklater's latest premiered on Netflix. We may never know if anybody saw it; what a world.

Obviously, I am as guilty as anyone of marginalizing work by one of our great soldiers of cinema (to borrow a phrase from Harmony Korine) and that speaks to any number of defects in my character and in my critical sensibility. As much as I relished the quietude and ease of the brief, plague-incited rise of streaming, as much as I have complained about the theatrical experience as wasted on an audience of inattentive, discourteous others, and as much as I have railed against the doom-saying brought about by the year's lukewarm box office and the Marvelizing of movies in recent decades, I remain a product of my environment and my experience. I suppose I am a bit of a hypocrite; aren't we all? But, with grateful apologies to Val Kilmer's Doc Holliday, my hypocrisy only goes so far.

In the 1990s, myriad circumstances cohered into an exhilarating moment wherein quiet explorations of the human condition could coexist (at the multiplex) with pure entertainment on a previously unimaginable scale. I won't bore anyone with a list, but Bad Boys and Richard Linklater were and are both major contributors to and legacies of that heady time. And while I might, depending on the day, tend to gravitate toward the noisier camp, it is not (or shouldn't be) at the cost of the more pensive one; hence this corrective.

is ostensibly based on the experiences of a real guy named Gary Johnson. As played by Powell, Gary is a floppy-haired, unlucky-in-love professor of philosophy whose aptitude for electronics leads him to a side-hustle working the surveillance side of police undercover efforts. When the unit's lead dirtbag/pretend contract killer Jasper (Austin Amelio) is benched for misadventure, Gary is thrust unexpectedly into a role for which he seems ideally suited. With his native intelligence and studied curiosity about psychology and human motivation, Gary is able to tailor his manufactured identities to the needs of his would-be clientele. He creates a different murderous persona for each, a shark to their remora that engenders trust and intimacy.

When, in character, Gary encounters the delightful and embattled Madison Figueroa Masters (Adria Arjona), though the artifice threatens the integrity of the enterprise. The two of them fall for each other, or at least so it would seem, and Gary's delicate balance turns vertiginous.

I've been more ignorant than skeptical about Powell, but Hit Man makes me get it. The screenplay allows him to stretch out and let his undeniable charm peek out from behind his many dramatis personae. Especially in the scenes with Arjona, we see two actors really exploring scenes and characters, getting at something as artful and articulate as it is sexy and occasionally silly.

Linklater, one of the most vital and consistently curious filmmakers to have survived the '90s renaissance, works with his trademark deceptive light touch, moving the camera just enough to let us know

The energy I'm giving couples from across the bar.

he is most definitely paying attention but not so much that he distracts us (we see you, Adil and Billal). R. 115M. NETFLIX.

INSIDE OUT 2. I probably wouldn't have watched Inside Out (2015) had my wife's (who endorses this message) therapist not recommended it to her. Much as I admire animation in general and Pixar creations specifically, I've been advised it's creepy to attend kiddie matinees and, at home, usually have too many grimy '70s movies to catch up on.

But watch it I did, and I found it to be remarkably insightful, filled with attention to the details of our hidden inner lives and the often-insidious influence thereof. And, of course, it's gorgeous and candy-colored and all of that.

So when I say the sequel is more of the same, I intend that as high praise. No other major movie in recent memory has squared off with the emotions of looming adulthood so honestly while remaining authentic and accessible, which may be why Inside Out 2 is one of the biggest releases of the year. The screening we attended was packed with teens — a suggestion that a plate-shift of self-knowledge and emotional intelligence may very well be under way. PG. 96M. Solstice Puzzles

It's summer solstice — and therefore puzzle — time again! Here are some of the best puzzles to have come my way in the last 12 months for your entertainment and frustration. So, deep breath and ...

Laterally Yours

When this old chestnut was posted in Britain's New Scientist, everyone got the obvious "aha" answer, but readers found at least 10 more imaginative solutions. Notice the left column adds up to 21, while the right column adds up to 24. By moving just one card, make the left and right columns add up to the same total.

Six Weeks of Seconds

Which is larger, the number of seconds in six weeks or 10! (1x2x3x4x5x6x7x8x9x10)?

Squares

Four squares. The total area of the two red squares is 20 units. What's the total area of the yellow squares?

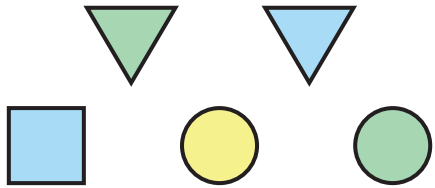

Instant Arithmetic

Quick (no calculator!), what's (5000²) – (4999²)?

The Prize

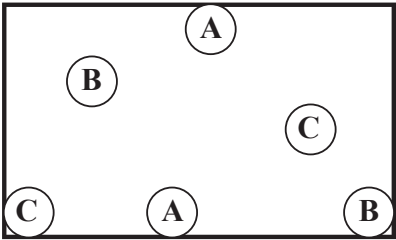

This little logic puzzle keeps popping up in my inbox. The set-up is that logicians Alice and Bob are shown five cards, with one card hiding a prize. Alice is told the shape of the prize card, while Bob is told the color of the prize card. Alice knows Bob knows the color, and Bob knows Alice knows the shape.

Host: (Round 1) "Do either of you know where the prize is?" (Silence)
Host: (Round 2) "Do you know now?" (Silence)
Host: (Round 3) "Do you know now?"
Alice and Bob: "Yes!"
Where's the prize?

ANSWERS

Laterally Yours

1: Turn the 9 upside down (columns add up to 21). 2: Place the 1 on top of the 5 (20). 3: Place the 3 on the 9 (18). 4: Place the 5 on the 7 (19). 5: Place the 1 facedown on the 4 (20). 6: Place the 4 facedown on the 1 (20). 7: Place the 3 facedown on the 6 (18). 8: Place the 6 facedown on the 3 (18). 9: Place the 2 facedown on the 5 (19). 10: Place the 5 facedown on the 2 (19). 11: Place the 3 partially under the 2, to make 2 cubed (24). 12: Take any card, set fire to it and use it to set fire to the other cards (0). Any more ideas?

Six Weeks of Seconds

Same, 3,628,800, since both factor out to $2^8 \times 3^4 \times 5^2 \times 7^1$. (For what it's worth, the number of milliseconds in a day is $5^5 \times 4^4 \times 3^3 \times 2^2 \times 1^1$).

Squares

10. Let a and b = lengths of the sides of the large and small yellow squares respectively. Then area of large red square = $(a+b)^2$, and of small red square $(a-b)^2$, so $(a+b)^2 + (a-b)^2 = 2(a^2 + b^2) = 20$. So $a^2 + b^2 =$ sum of areas of yellow squares = 10.

Instant Arithmetic

9,999, since $a^2 - b^2 = (a + b)(a - b) = (9,999)(1)$

The Prize

Green triangle. Round 1: If it had been under the blue square or yellow circle, one of them would have said so. Round 2: Having eliminated the blue square and yellow circle, Alice learns it's not under the blue triangle (or Bob, knowing the color, would have said so), while Bob learns it's not under the green circle (or Alice, knowing the shape, would have said so). Round 3: Alice knows that Bob would have said if the prize was under the blue triangle, and Bob knows that Alice would have said if the prize was under the green circle. So now they both know it's under the green triangle.

NOTICE OF PROPERTY TAX DELINQUENCY AND IMPENDING DEFAULT

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3351, 3352

I, Amy Christensen, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify as follows:

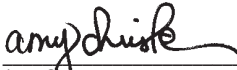

That at close of business on June 30, 2024, by operation of law, any real property (unless previously tax-defaulted and not redeemed) that have any delinquent taxes, assessments, or other charges levied for the fiscal year 2023-24, and/or any delinquent supplemental taxes levied prior to the fiscal year 2023-24 shall be declared tax-defaulted.

That unless the tax defaulted property is completely redeemed through payment of all unpaid amounts, together with penalties and fees prescribed by law or an installment plan is initiated and maintained; the property may be sold subsequently at a tax sale to satisfy the tax lien.

That a detailed list of all properties remaining tax-defaulted at the close of business on June 30, 2024, and not redeemed prior to being submitted for publication, shall be published on or before September 8, 2024.

That information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by Amy Christensen, Humboldt County Tax Collector at 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, California 95501 (707) 476-2450.

I certify or (declare), under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct.

Amy Christensen
Humboldt County Tax Collector

Executed at Eureka, Humboldt County, California, on May 22nd, 2024. Published in the North Coast Journal on June 6th, 13th & 20th, 2024.

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL
TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3361, 3362

Pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code 3691 and 3692.4, the following conditions will, by operation of law, subject real property to the Tax Collector's power to sell.

1) All property for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for five or more years.

Note: The power to sell schedule for nonresidential commercial property is three or more years of tax-defaulted status, unless the county adopts, by ordinance or resolution, the five-year tax default schedule.

2) All property that has a nuisance abatement lien recorded against it and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

3) Any property that has been identified and requested for purchase by a city, county, city and county or nonprofit organization to serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

The parcels listed herein meet one or more of the criteria listed above and thus, will become subject to the Tax Collector's power to sell on July 1, 2024, at 12:01 a.m., by operation of law. The Tax Collector's power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to close of business on the last business day in June. The right to an installment plan terminates on the last business day in June, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at close of business on the last business day prior to the date of the sale by the Tax Collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request, by Amy Christensen, Humboldt County Tax Collector, 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, CA 95501, (707)476-2450.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of June 2024, is shown opposite the assessment/parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel/Assessment Number (APN/ASMT), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the Assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map, if applicable, and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The Assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's office.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 916-939-0772 or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case PFI-242001. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 916-939-0772, or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case PFI-242001 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid, by remitting the funds and affidavit described in Section 2924m(c) of the Civil Code, so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. Kyle Steven Wear

Kyle Steven Wear, a beloved son, brother, husband and father whose life's work was dedicated to protecting the rare and endangered plants of his adopted North Coast home, died April 29 with his wife and stepfather at his side after battling heart issues caused by a virus he contracted six years earlier. He was 54.

Born to Mary and Bob Wear in San Diego on March 16, 1970, Kyle grew up surrounded by extended family, including both sets of grandparents and numerous aunts and uncles, during a quintessential Southern California childhood spent camping in the region's inland valleys and swimming, spearfishing and surfing along the coast, the latter sometimes when he was supposed to be in class.

He would often take his adored dog Pepper down to Ocean Beach where she would patiently wait on the shore while Kyle went out, except for the time Pepper decided to jump off the jetty and he had to come home early.

At the age of 8, he gained a second father in Mike Klose, who played a formative role in helping raise Kyle and his younger sister Keely after marrying their late mother and remained a steadfast and guiding presence throughout his life.

Kyle graduated from Point Loma High School in 1988 and attended San Diego State University with an eye on a degree in engineering before transferring to Humboldt State University, where he took a botany course and never looked back.

Not that his college years were all about academics. Among his favorite stories from that time was how Sublime played twice in the living room of the house he lived in on Fern Street, much to the consternation of neighbors who called police, because some of the band members were friends with his roommate.

After receiving his bachelor's and master's in biology, Kyle went on to become one of the North Coast's foremost biological consultants, known for aptly walking the delicate line of advocating for his clients while strictly adhering to regulatory guidelines.

During a visit home to San Diego in December of 2002, Kyle was introduced to his wife, Kimberly, at the party of a high school friend — who happens to be her cousin and married to her best friend — in a not-so-discrete group effort to set the two up. One year later, they were engaged, with Kimberly's family often joking that he came pre-approved. They married in September of 2004 and settled into their life in Arcata.

The proudest moment of Kyle's life arrived three years later when their daughter Averie was born on a bitterly cold January day that began with Kyle spraying down the car to de-ice it before they were told there was no need to rush to the hospital. By the time they were ready to go, the doors were frozen shut and an ice slick covered the driveway, leaving Kyle, Kimberly and her mom laughing hysterically in those early morning hours as they gingerly navigated getting into the car while trying not to fall — or wake up the neighbors.

His love for Averie was without bounds and Kyle spent many years taking her on hikes, bike rides and morning trips to Los Bagels. He was the dad who hand-made empanadas for bake sales, attended every school performance, cheered from the sidelines at cross country and BMX races and helped out on science fair projects that often centered around him teaching her about the basic tenets of his field, like using the 50-20 rule to determine plant coverage and how to define a wetland.

More recently, anyone who knows Kyle well enough was probably regaled with videos featuring Averie that were produced by her high school leadership class. Just before he died, Kyle was so proud of her for pursuing and receiving a seal of biliteracy in Spanish and making it to the state History Day competition in Sacramento.

Kyle was profoundly impacted by the loss of his mother Mary, whose outer beauty was outshined by her fierce love for and pride in her children before her life — like Kyle's — was unfairly cut short at almost the same age. After her death in March of 2002, every major milestone — from his wedding to Averie's birth — was tinged with sadness that she was not there to share the moment. Kyle often told Kimberly how Mary would have swooped Averie up as soon as they arrived for a visit and they would have been hard pressed to lift a finger to take care of her during their regular trips to San Diego. From Mary, Kyle inherited his artistic talent, which she inherited from her mother, and he, in turn, passed on to Averie.

Like his dad, Kyle loved to tinker on projects around the house, from making the polished concrete countertops in his and Kimberly's kitchen to installing their home's hardwood floors, although those sometimes resulted in shouts of "this is a disaster" before, as always, working out in the end.

Bob and Kyle spoke almost daily, often just chatting about the latest Padres game or Kyle's most recent fishing excursion, with the answering machine regularly ringing out with the message, "Grandad, checking in."

A talented cook who somehow seemed to use nearly every dish in kitchen, Kyle loved to experiment with culinary creations, often taking his latest bread baking or wood-fired pizza endeavors to share with the many friends he made at Six Rivers Brewery and the Bigfoot Taproom, where he liked to "network" over a beer after a long day of working at his home office.

While on the quiet side in general, Kyle still made friends effortlessly with his easy-going nature, great laugh and a broad, sometimes silly, smile — one that shone brightest when he was with his daughter.

Preceded in death by his mother Mary, his grandparents, father-in-law Bob, Aunts Sharon and Linda and cousin Ryan, Kyle is survived by his wife Kimberly, daughter Averie, father Bob, stepfather Mike and wife Bev, his sister Keely, mother-in-law Nann and sisters-in-law Katherine (Tom) and Karen, as well as numerous aunts, uncles and cousins, his nieces Katie and Genevieve (Ryan) and nephews Robert, Tom (Nicole) and James (Emily) and their children.

Kyle fought hard after receiving news of his diagnosis, bouncing back time and time again to return to the field work he so loved, often confounding his doctors by his ability to still climb mountains, crawl under whitethorn thickets and trudge through slash to survey for rare plants and delineate wetlands.

Still, he was private about his health struggles, never wanting to worry even his closest friends and family members. In the end, the damage caused by the virus proved too much.

Kyle loved his family, his adopted North Coast home and the many friends he made before and during his more than 30 years here. In his honor, please raise a glass of whatever makes you happy. He would want you to remember him that way.

In the words of our wedding song, Kyle, in my life, I love you more.

You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (916) 939-0772 or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case 22-00007. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (916) 939-0772, or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case 22-00007 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. RESTAURANT SPECIALS!

June 21-30

AT 13 LOCAL RESTAURANTS

SEE THEM ALL INSIDE OR AT

NCJRESTAURANTWEEK.COM

Welcome to NCJ Restaurant Week!

Are you waiting for a special occasion to go out? Because here it is: NCJ Restaurant Week.

We promise the frozen pizza in your fridge will wait. But not this 10-day celebration of local restaurants and the joy of tucking a napkin in your collar before tucking into the special. Once you've picked a spot for the day, no agonizing choices are required. Limited-time specials run the gamut from stacked burgers to creamy pastas, fusion tacos and classic cocktails. Hey, you want the lobster? Order the lobster, baby – it's NCJ Restaurant Week (*ties on bib, shoots finger guns).

Bon appétit, Humboldt.

NCJ Restaurant Week Pro Tips

SOMETIMES RESTAURANTS RUN OUT.

Because kitchens aren't staffed with genies and supplies are not infinite, a given restaurant could run out of its #NCJRestaurantWeek meals toward the end of a shift. If that happens, know that we feel your pain and it's going to be OK. There's always a tomorrow when you can come back and order the meal we all want you to have. Don't let your hangry self get the better of you and remember that making and serving your food is a noble calling. Be kind to those doing this important work.

YES, YOU MAY HAVE TO WAIT.

As mentioned above, folks are excited for #NCJRestaurantWeek. As during NCJ Burger Week, your favorite participating spot may go from sleepy to packed. Don't be surprised if you have to wait a little. Treat yourself to a beverage. Revel in the anticipation. And when your food shows up in all its delicious glory, post about it on social media using #NCJRestaurantWeek. There could be prizes.

NOT TIPPING MAKES YOU THAT CUSTOMER. DON'T BE THAT CUSTOMER.

We all get caught up in the excitement of a deal. But don't lose your manners and remember the folks cooking and serving are handling more orders than usual. Tip at least 20 percent and walk out with your head held high, making your parents and the NCJ team proud. Your restaurant purveyors will remember it when you come back.

YOU SHOULD GET A LITTLE SOMETHING ON THE SIDE, TOO.

You're not required to buy anything else but can you really say you've had the full experience without a beverage or a dessert? This is the perfect time to try out the other goodies our restaurant pals are cooking up while showing a little love to local businesses. Is there craft beer on the menu? Milkshake? Live a little.

KEEP UP WITH THE MADNESS ON FACEBOOK. AND INSTAGRAM.

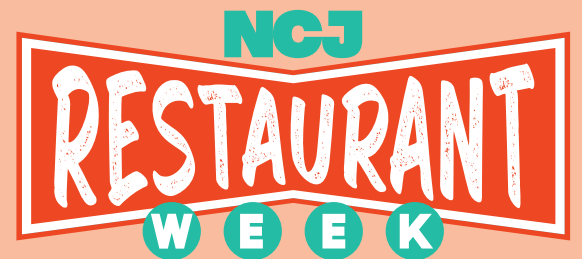

#NCJRestaurantWeek is on Facebook and Instagram. Follow us and get up-to-date info on everything #NCJRestaurantWeek while you peruse the foodporn. And don't be shy – join the fun and share your own restaurant photos using #NCJRestaurantWeek.

MURPHY'S MARKET COMMUNITY SPOTLIGHT

Meet Devon

After 17 years of teaching at McKinleyville High, Devon Van Dam rediscovered her love for growing flowers. With family support, she built a studio and greenhouse from upcycled materials, including old-growth redwood shingles from Alves.

Devon began her floral journey with weddings at the Lost Whale Inn and arrangements for Moonstone Grill. In 2018, Nelson at Murphy's Market in Trinidad honored her by asking to sell her bouquets at the market. Since moving here in 1999, Murphy's Market has been a cornerstone in her life, where staff treated her and her daughter like family. Devon fondly remembers checker Moe, who entertained her daughter at the register, making shopping a joy.

At Moonstone in Bloom, Devon grows many of her flowers, infusing each arrangement with love and care. Visit Murphy's to pick up a bouquet of Moonstone in Bloom flowers cultivated with passion!
